

Non-constant volatility models and the Black-Scholes formula - Kais Hamza

The Black-Scholes formula has been derived under the assumption of constant volatility in stocks. In spite of evidence that this parameter is not constant, this formula is widely used by the markets. This project addresses the question of whether a model for stock price exists such that the Black-Scholes formula holds while the volatility is nonconstant.